A BALLAD OF THE SEVEN-TEENTH CENTURY. THE DUMB MAID:

OR, THE YOUNG GALLANT TRAPAN'D.

To a New Tune, call'd "Dum, dam, dam; or, I would I were in my own Country," etc.

Licens'd and Enter'd according to Order.

All you that pass along,
Give ear auto my song.
Concerning a youth
that was young, young, young;
And of a Maiden fair
Few with her might compare,
But alack, and alas, she
was damb, damb, damb,

She was be auteous, fresh and gay, Like the p easant flowers in May. And her cheeks were as round as a plant, pitch, plum; She was ment in every part, And she stole away his heart, But alack, and alas, she new doub, dumb, dumb.

At length this Country Blade Wedded this pretty Maid. And he kindly conducted her home, home, home, Thus in her Benaty bright Lay his whole Delight, But alack, and alas, she

Now will I plainly show
What work this Maid could do.
Which a pattern may be
for girls young, young, young.
O she both day and night
In working took delight.
But alack and alsa, she
was damb, damb, damb,

She could brew and she could bake, She could brew and she could bake.
She could sweep the house
with a broom, broom, broom;
She could knit and se w and spin,
And could do any such like thing.
But alack, and alas, she was dumb, dumb, dumb.

But alas this man did go, The Doctor's skill to know, Saying: Sir, can you cure a Woman of the Dumb? O it is the easiest part
That belongs to my Art,
For to cure a Woman
of the dumb, dumb, dumb.

To the Doctor he did her bring. And he cut her Chattering-string. And he set her Tongue on the run, run, run. In the morning he did rise And she filled his house with cries, And she ratified in his cost like a drum, drum, drum,

To the Doctor he did go With his heart well fill'd with woe, Crying, Doctor, I am Now I cannot make her hold her tongue, tongue, tongue.

The Doctor thus did say: When she went from me away, She was perfectly cured of the dumb, dumb, dumb. But it's beyond the Art of Man, Let him do the best he can, For to make a scolding Woman hold her tongue, tongue, tongue,

So as you to me came Return you back again And take you the Oyl of Hazel strong; With it anoint her body round, When she makes the House to sound, So perhaps you may charm her
